ARTICLE 29 - STANDARDS OF CONDUCT FOR EMPLOYEES

The AGENCY must establish safeguards to prevent employees, consultants, or members of governing bodies from using their positions for purposes that are, or give the appearance of being, motivated by a desire for private financial gain for themselves or others such as those with whom they have family, business, or other ties. Therefore, each institution receiving financial support must have written policy guidelines on conflict of interest and the avoidance thereof. These guidelines should reflect State and local laws and must cover financial interests, gifts, gratuities and favors, nepotism, and other areas such as political participation and bribery. These rules must also indicate the conditions under which outside activities, relationships, or financial interests are proper or improper, and provide for notification of these kinds of activities, relationships, or financial interests to a responsible and objective institution official. For the requirements of code of conduct applicable to procurement under grants, see the procurement standards prescribed by 45 CFR Part 74, Subpart P and 45 CFR Part 92.36.

The rules of conduct must contain a provision for prompt notification of violations to a responsible and objective grantee official and must specify the type of administrative action that may be taken against an individual for violations. Administrative actions, which would be in addition to any legal penalty(ies), may include oral admonishment, written reprimand, reassignment, demotion, suspension, or separation. Suspension or separation of a key official must be reported promptly to the County.

A copy of the rules of conduct must be made available to each officer, employee, board member, and consultant of the recipient organization who is working on the grant supported project or activity and the rules must be enforced to the extent permissible under State and local law or to the extent to which the grantee determines it has legal and practical enforcement capacity.

The rules need not be formally submitted to and approved by the County; however, they must be made available for a review upon request, for example, during a site visit.

If the County determines, using credible information available to the public, that a false certification has been submitted by AGENCY, this Contract may be terminated and a civil penalty equal to the greater of $2 million or twice the amount of this Contract shall be imposed, pursuant to F.S. 287.135.

If the AGENCY transfers all public records to the County upon completion of the Contract, the AGENCY shall destroy any duplicate public records that are exempt, or confidential and exempt from public records disclosure requirements. If the AGENCY keeps and maintains public records upon completion of the Contract, the AGENCY shall meet all applicable requirements for retaining public records. All records stored electronically by the AGENCY must be provided to County, upon request of the County's Custodian of Public Records, in a format that is compatible with the information technology systems of County, at no cost to County.

Scope of Work

Palm Beach County Hunger Relief/ Meal Deficit Action Application

Recognizing the unacceptable consequences of local hunger, the United Way of Palm Beach County and the Palm Beach County Board of Commissioners, backed by a group of 183 organizations, convened the Hunger Relief Project and identified the need to create a comprehensive plan to reduce local hunger. Feeding Florida worked in partnership with PBC officials and other local leaders on a Meal Deficit Analysis for the County that identifies by block group missing meals after accounting for food subsidies such as SNAP, WIC, and food pantry offerings, and a supply and demand analysis of current pantry food flow (Phase 1 and 2 of work thus far completed). Phase 3 (this scope) is structured to help PBC leaders take the next important step of translating the Meal Deficit findings into an action plan.

Phase 4 Scope: Meal Deficit Action Plan Tools

1. Review Meal Deficit data and existing maps already completed to identify more action-orientated zones.
2. Review meal gap data scale and amend scale to be more actionable and to provide better “progress” measures and reports as to how to demonstrate and track “moving the needle” towards reducing the meal gap (through specific food of any kind, including food bank groceries and emergency food boxes).
3. Create a master key code map (and later break it up into the revised smaller zone maps) with streets and block groups outlined, and other identifiers, with an easy-to-read block group code on each block group. Typically, block group IDs are very lengthy and look daunting. We would take the original long ID and create a new code, such as 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, etc. – all the way up to 885, which is the total number of PBC block groups. We need to translate the original identifier into smaller digit numbers so it is readable and manageable on the map and, later, in the “action” table. The master map would serve as a key, and not have other data on it. It would be used for those distributing the food or making the food distribution plan.
4. Take Feeding Florida’s latest list of PBC pantries and other food channels and geocode it; test geocoding; and create an accuracy score. In addition, this could include all public schools, for example.
5. Begin the creation of a strategic action-orientated data file. The first step here is for the spreadsheet to have the following fields:
 - Name of food channel (and potentially public schools because, in the future, they would be a good location for emergency food distribution – or local leaders can identify other ubiquitous-type entities that serve the same purpose – the addresses are publicly available so it is an efficient step to include them)
 - Address of entity
 - Any other existing Feeding Florida data such as current food flow that might already be paired with entity (not necessary but could be useful later

- on – generally, it's best to include this data early if it is available as it is inefficient to add it later)
- The latitude/longitude of the entity (the geocode)
 - The original ID of the block group the entity sits in
 - The new block group ID code
 - The meal gap score per the amended data scale
 - Block group population, number of households, number of children, race/ethnicity, language spoken at home, average family size, income, etc. – all in separate fields along the data string continuum
6. Also include SNAP stores in the spreadsheet outlined in #5, so that we can include a more comprehensive look at not only charitable food flow but market food flow (i.e. the ability to purchase healthy groceries in the vicinity, as all residents, even those who rely on food subsidies, need access to retail channels for food acquisition).
 7. Create these new zone maps in total, and then create an action map for each zone. For example, all block groups have a meal gap score, but not all block groups need intervention. Therefore, the action map for each zone would have only the data on it on top of those block groups that need the meals. If, for example, 200 total block groups need food intervention, then the action maps would be the data shown only for those block groups. This way, those who are doing the distribution plan know more clearly where the meals need to go. This would also factor in conditions of retail food channels, and any related recommendations for improving them.
 8. Create an easy-to-read table that links the maps and the outlined block group codes to the meal deficit metric for each, and to the action-needed block groups requiring immediate food, and other data (number of children, total pop, race, etc. of that block group). Then create corresponding maps with the color code of the meal deficit.
 9. Quality control action maps for clear action itself and also for any communication barriers. The purpose is to be easy to use, with the robustness of the analysis, but not “academic” in nature.
 10. Test tools internally.
 11. Create a training PowerPoint for how to use these new tools.
 12. Create a corresponding written manual for how to use the tools.
 13. Present and review by phone to PBC county leaders.
 14. Strategize with PBC and Feeding Florida on other areas of interest, such as potential updates moving forward.
 15. Co-brand deliverables (Mari Gallagher Research & Consulting Group receiving research/consulting acknowledgement – reports and action deliverables / action toolkit to be branded on MG format – and PBC and Feeding Florida recognized for their contributions – their logos to be included, if desired).

Payment Schedule

The Scope of Work consists of specific completion phases and required tasks and deliverables for each phase of work as outlined in the scope of work.

Compensation for the work tasks and deliverables herein shall be in accordance with the successful completion of the tasks and deliverables for Phase 4 deliverables as set forth in the following schedule of payments:
