I. EXECUTIVE BRIEF

Motion and Title: Staff recommends motion to:

A) approve a Contract For Consulting/Professional Services between Palm Beach County and Inwater Research Group (IRG) for sea turtle monitoring in an amount not-to-exceed $49,255.20 commencing upon execution and ending September 2, 2027;

B) adopt a Resolution authorizing the Clerk of the Court to disburse $35,729 from the Pollution Recovery Trust Fund (PRTF) to cover a portion of the costs associated with the Contract;

C) approve a Budget Transfer of $35,729 from the PRTF Reserves to fund a portion of the Contract; and

D) delegate authority to the County Administrator, or designee, to sign all future time extensions, task assignments, certifications and other forms associated with the Contract, and any necessary minor amendments that do not substantially change the scope of work or terms and conditions of the Contract including reducing the amount of hours worked and the Contract's not-to-exceed amount due to excusable weather delays.

Summary: This Contract provides for a continuation of monitoring and assessment of sea turtle populations in the Lake Worth Lagoon (LWL) and Jupiter Inlet sites by IRG, a not-for-profit corporation based in Martin County. IRG is an organization that focuses on conservation efforts of key coastal species through unique in-water sampling and data collection techniques. IRG conducted the first ever in-water assessment of sea turtles in the LWL in 2005 and has continued to assess populations and collect data utilized for management strategies related to restoration and enhancement efforts within the lagoon and adjacent waterways. The LWL Management Plan recommends assessing sea turtle populations as a means of evaluating the success of environmental restoration efforts and overall lagoon health. The Contract will be funded by the Palm Beach County (PBC) PRTF and Florida Department of Environmental Protection (FDEP) LWL Monitoring Project Grant Agreement LP50202 (R2017-0082). The cost to the County is $35,728.90. District 1 (SF)

Background and Justification: Juvenile sea turtles are considered an indicator species of habitat quality and previous studies have found that LWL and adjacent areas are important developmental habitats for green sea turtles. This 20-year data set is used to evaluate changes in sea turtle population and health, which correlate to LWL health, seagrass density, and water quality.

The Consultant shall notify the County's representative in writing when 90% of the "not to exceed amount" has been reached. The Consultant will bill the County on a monthly basis, no later than the 15th of the following month, or as otherwise provided, at the amounts set forth in Exhibit B for services rendered toward the completion of the Scope of Work. Where incremental billings for partially completed items are permitted, the total billings shall not exceed the estimated percentage of completion as of the billing date. The County shall deem invoices received during and prior to the expiration of the Closeout Period as final billing for goods and services provided under the contract. Consultant's failure to submit pending invoices during the Closeout Period shall serve as an admission that no pending invoices remain. Nothing herein shall limit the County's discretion to make the final determination whether payment may be made to consultant after the expiration or termination of the contract.
- D. Final Invoice: In order for both parties herein to close their books and records, the Consultant will clearly state "final invoice" on the Consultant's final/last billing to the County. The said rates and costs shall be adjusted to exclude any significant sums should the County determine that the rates and costs were increased due to inaccurate, incomplete or noncurrent wage rates or due to inaccurate representations of fees paid to outside consultants. The County shall exercise its rights under this Article 4 within three (3) years following final payment.

The Consultant understands and agrees that a material violation of this clause shall be considered a material breach of this Contract and may result in termination of this Contract, disqualification or debarment of the company from participating in County contracts, or other sanctions. This clause is not enforceable by or for the benefit of, and creates no obligation to, any third party. Consultant shall include this language in its subcontracts.

ARTICLE 22 - AUTHORITY TO PRACTICE

The Consultant hereby represents and warrants that it has and will continue to maintain all licenses and approvals required to conduct its business, and that it will at all times conduct its business activities in a reputable manner. ASSESSMENT OF MARINE TURTLES IN THE NORTHERN LAKE WORTH LAGOON – 2026-2027

PREPARED FOR:

Palm Beach County Department Of Environmental Resources Management
2300 Jog Road, 4th Floor
West Palm Beach, FL 33411

February 2026

INTRODUCTION

Since March of 2005, Inwater Research Group, Inc. (IRG) has been conducting marine turtle population assessments in the Lake Worth Lagoon on behalf of the Palm Beach County Department of Environmental Resources Management (PBCERM). The primary objectives of these prior studies were to:

- 1) Obtain baseline data on species abundance, size frequencies, and sex ratios. These baseline data consist of quantitative measurements that can be used to determine stage-specific abundance, and in the future, determine recoveries or declines in these populations.
- 2) Determine Catch per Unit Effort (CPUE) at specific sites in Lake Worth Lagoon. This measurement allows for direct comparisons over time within Lake Worth Lagoon and with other ongoing research projects throughout the state.
- 3) Document the prevalence of fibropapillomatosis (FP), a potentially deadly disease that occurs at a high frequency among sea turtles in Indian River Lagoon and Florida Bay.
- 4) Obtain blood samples for genetic, sex ratio, and disease analysis.
- 5) Determine spatial distribution of sea turtles within Lake Worth Lagoon by collecting GPS waypoints for sightings and captures.

The above objectives have been met and confirmed that sea turtles are present in the lagoon year-round, identified specific areas of particularly high abundance, and provided baseline data on the abundance, size class structure, genetic origin, and disease incidence of marine turtles in the lagoon.

To take advantage of and build upon the baseline information gathered in the prior work and to gather current information on the population levels, health, and habitat use of turtles in a particularly important and vulnerable part of the lagoon, additional efforts are proposed to gather data in the northern segment of Lake Worth Lagoon near Little Munyon Island and Jupiter Inlet. This proposal includes sea turtle abundance surveys as well as continued capture and tagging efforts that will include an assessment of rates and severity of FP. It will also further investigate recently observed differences in diet between seasons and study sites. The primary objectives of the proposed work are to:

- 1) Conduct seasonal sea turtle monitoring efforts in the area near Little Munyon Island and in the vicinity of the Jupiter Inlet in 2026-2027.
- 2) Collect sea turtle abundance data on a permanently established monitoring transect near Little Munyon Island that will serve as an accurate index in-water abundance monitoring site for the area.
- 3) Conduct capture and tagging efforts in the Little Munyon Island and Jupiter Inlet areas to gather and document data on size class distribution and FP incidence and severity.
- 4) Examine dietary preferences of captured green turtles by season and study site.
- 5) Attach acoustic tags on up to ten turtles near Little Munyon Island to assess turtle movement in the area. If pending permit requests are accepted, acoustic tags will be applied to one loggerhead (if captured) and up to nine green turtles. Acoustic tags will be applied on up to ten green turtles if no loggerhead is captured or the permitting request is denied.

Sea turtles are viewed as an indicator species of the health of the lagoon. Long-term efforts to monitor the sea turtle population residing in the Lake Worth Lagoon are a valuable addition to the comprehensive program to restore the Lake Worth Lagoon being conducted by PBCERM. Local, state, and federal restoration plans include altering the amount of freshwater discharged to the lagoon, improving water quality, and constructing habitat restoration projects, all of which will lead to an increase in the amount of seagrass and other habitats in the lagoon and improve developmental habitat for juvenile green turtles. This project will help determine how sea turtles respond to these changes.

In addition, there was a recent deployment of multiple acoustic receivers as part of the cooperative Florida Atlantic Coastal Telemetry (FACT) at strategic points throughout LWL. This allows for the deployment of acoustic tags on sea turtles as a cost-effective method for monitoring movements of turtles within the area. Since recapture and tag return data for turtles captured at the Little Munyon study site are sparse, this potentially allows for a better understanding of habitat utilization by individual turtles. Additionally, researchers studying other marine species within the lagoon are also deploying acoustic tags and use the same receivers to study movements of their target species within the lagoon. Being a partner with FACT is a cost-effective solution to tracking turtles, elasmobranchs, and fish, and to assist in monitoring the effects of lagoon restoration.

SCOPE OF WORK

Materials and Methods

Sixteen days of field work to gather sea turtle data will be conducted. Field work will include eight days of quantitative visual transects and capture efforts focused on the area in the northern lagoon near Little Munyon Island and eight days of visual transects and capture efforts focused on the area near Jupiter Inlet. Effort will be divided into quarterly sampling periods spread throughout a 15-month period. In the event that the Consultant is unable to complete sixteen days of field work due to weather or other unforeseen conditions, payment to the Consultant will be reduced in accordance with Exhibit B.

Visual Surveys

Sea turtle abundance and species composition will be evaluated using Haphazard Unmarked Nonlinear Transect (HUNT) surveys and permanently established grid transects.

HUNT transects will be conducted at both sites using the methodology employed in the previous phases of the project. The abundance data collected (observations per transect kilometer) will be directly comparable with data collected in the previous phases, allowing for a long-term assessment of sea turtle abundance at the selected sites. Data collected for all observations will include species, size class (juvenile, subadult, or adult), position in the water column (surface or underwater), and the GPS waypoint of the observation. Attempts will be made to conduct 40 km of HUNT transects at the Little Munyon Island site based upon favorable environmental conditions. The turtles near Jupiter Inlet are clustered in such a small geographical area that a turtle is usually sighted so quickly that it likely biases abundance estimates at this site. HUNTs will only be used at the Jupiter Inlet study site when conducting exploratory visual surveys outside the main capture location.

A permanent transect grid has been established at the Little Munyon Island site. The layout of the transect grid was established to encompass the entire area of high-density turtle sightings in the Little Munyon Island area. The permanent transect grid covers a total of 10 km and will be run at least twice during the contract period when and if conditions are suitable for meeting the assumptions of density estimation (most importantly, when tide level, cloud cover, and water visibility allow for top to bottom visibility across the entire transect grid). Data collected for all observations will include species, size class (juvenile, subadult, or adult), position in the water column (surface or underwater), and the GPS waypoint of the observation. Large amounts of variability in the results of these surveys over the last few years have raised the possibility that the transect grid lines may be too closely spaced, resulting in oversampling (the possibility the same turtle is being counted more than once in a survey run). In this proposal, we use a revised transect grid utilized in 2019 and sample on that grid at least twice.

Captures

Capture efforts will also be conducted at both the Little Munyon Island and Jupiter Inlet sites. Captures by dip net and hand captures by the "rodeo" technique will be used to safely and efficiently capture turtles. Dip net captures shall be conducted using a large mesh nylon net with a three-foot diameter hoop mounted on a twelve-foot-long handle. Observers in the tower guide the boat into position for the net operator in the bow to quickly "scoop" a resting or slowly swimming turtle. The boat then slowly follows the turtle until a dip net capture attempt can be made. If conditions of water depth and/or clarity or the behavior of the turtle are such that a capture cannot be easily and safely accomplished, the pursuit is terminated.

Hand captures (rodeo) consist of the boat closely following a turtle at slow speed until a diver can jump from the boat to capture the turtle by hand. Rodeo captures will be employed for turtles which are too large, in water too deep, or swimming too actively for the dip net capture method. Rodeo captures will be limited to waters greater than one meter deep for diver safety and to avoid impacts to seagrasses. The boat slowly follows the turtle until a rodeo capture attempt can be made. If conditions of water depth and/or clarity or the behavior of the turtle are such that a capture cannot be easily and safely accomplished, the pursuit is terminated.

When environmental conditions do not allow for captures to be conducted by dip net and rodeo methods, tangle nets will be used. Tangle net captures utilize a large-mesh tangle net 150 m long by 5 m deep, consisting of 40 cm stretch (knot to knot) multi-filament mesh suspended from a foam core braided polyethylene top (float) line with fixed buoys spaced 3.5 m apart. The bottom (lead) line consists of small diameter lead core line. Each end of the net is secured with a small Danforth-type anchor. When turtles encounter the net and become entangled, they are quickly removed and placed on the deck of the boat. Using tangle nets increases the likelihood of bycatch for non-target species such as marine mammals and elasmobranchs, and therefore are only to be used when environmental conditions are not sufficient for preferred capture methods.

A minimum of 48 h of capture effort will be conducted annually. All captured turtles will be measured, weighed, photographed, and tagged with flipper and implanted tags prior to release. Tumors associated with fibropapillomatosis (FP) will be measured and recorded on a standardized tumor score sheet.

Morphometric data will be collected for each turtle captured using forestry calipers and flexible tape. Measurements include straight standard carapace length, straight minimum carapace length, straight carapace width, straight plastron length, curved carapace length, curved carapace width, and head width. Inconel #681 tags are applied to the trailing edge of each front flipper and a passive integrated transponder (PIT) tag is subcutaneously applied to the right front flipper. Before insertion of any tags, all flippers are scanned for the presence of any pre-existing PIT tags. Turtles are also weighed and photographed before they are released.

Tumors associated with FP will be measured and recorded at both sites on a standardized tumor score sheet. The total tumor score is used to assign turtles to severity categories. Throughout the processing period, the turtle is kept moist with wet towels and pads on the deck of the boat. Turtles with FP are kept separate from other turtles and separate sets of measuring and tagging gear are used. After all samples and measurements are taken (approximately 25 min), the turtle is released near the original capture site. After the release, tagging and measuring equipment is disinfected with a bleach solution. The rate and severity of FP incidence will be compared with data gathered since 2005 in the previous phases, with the goal of establishing any long-term trends in Lake Worth Lagoon.

Diet

Dietary samples will be extracted from captured green turtles at both sites using a technique called "lavage." The lavage process flushes food items from the esophagus and mouth areas. During this procedure turtles are held on their back with their posterior slightly elevated. A soft plastic veterinarian's stomach tube is lubricated with vegetable oil and cautiously inserted into the mouth and throat area. Seawater is then pumped through the tube using a veterinarian's double action pump. The tube is gently moved back and forth along the length of the esophagus and dietary items are collected in a bucket positioned under the turtle's head. The extracted diet samples are strained through a fine mesh net (mesh ~1mm) and placed into a collection jar. A 4% formalin-seawater solution is used to preserve the sample for future analysis. Date, location, tag numbers of the turtle, and absence/presence of FP tumors are recorded on the collection jar. Dietary lavage samples from both sites will be sorted under a dissecting microscope and identified to the lowest practicable taxon by Karen Holloway-Adkins of East Coast Biologists in Indialantic, Florida. Due to the high number of recapture events at the Jupiter Inlet site, dietary samples will only be collected twice per individual turtle per contract.

Sex Determination

Blood samples will be collected from a subset (up to ten individuals) of captured turtles for sex determination. Blood will be collected within five minutes of capture so as not to bias the samples. Blood will be drawn from the cervical sinus using a sterile vacutainer with no additive. Prior to blood collection, the site will be treated with Provoidine and isopropyl alcohol. A 22-gauge 1" needle will be used on turtles < 45 cm SCL, while a 1 ½" needle will be used on turtles 45 cm SCL or greater. We will collect approximately 5 ml from each turtle and will not exceed 3 ml of blood per 1 kg of an individual turtle's mass. If no blood is obtained during the first attempt, a maximum of two additional attempts will be performed.

We will use the published plasma testosterone ranges for loggerhead and green turtles. To determine sex of the immature sea turtles that fall within the testosterone range that cannot be determined (estimated 5–10% of immature turtles), we will use published data to create the statistical model formula established by previous researchers to evaluate relationships between testosterone concentration, sex, and other covariates (day of year, carapace length, tail length) to estimate the probability that a sea turtle is male. Because their specific equation only defines the relationship in their study population (i.e., Pacific green sea turtles), we will create a unique equation for Florida's Atlantic loggerhead and green turtles using measurements from this population that can be applied to future projects as well. We will perform hormone extractions and quantify testosterone concentrations in plasma using a commercially available enzyme-linked immunosorbent assay (ELISA). All necessary laboratory validations will be performed, and each sample will be analyzed for its hormone concentration, per the ELISA kit instructions. All sex determination analysis will be conducted by Justin Perrault and Katie Fowler of Loggerhead Marinelife Center in Juno Beach, Florida.

Acoustic Tracking

A subset of turtles will be tagged with acoustic transmitters to document temporal and spatial distribution, habitat utilization, and potential movement of individuals within the lagoon and possibly into adjacent waters. Innovasea V13 or similar coded transmitters weighing less than 25 g will be attached to the carapace by using a two-part cool-setting epoxy and fishing wire. Acoustic tags will be applied on up to ten turtles near Little Munyon Island. If pending permit requests are accepted, acoustic tags will be applied to one loggerhead (if captured) and up to nine green turtles. Acoustic tags will be applied on up to ten green turtles if no loggerhead is captured or the permitting request is denied.

Historically, almost all sightings and captures in Lake Worth Lagoon have consisted of juvenile green turtles; however, three loggerheads were captured during the past few years. IRG is currently in consultation with National Marine Fisheries Service (NMFS) requesting a permit modification allowing for the acoustic tagging of loggerheads at this study site. If permit approval is acquired, IRG will attempt to place an acoustic transmitter on up to one loggerhead, if captured, during this contract period.

To prepare the carapace application site (posterior left or right marginal scutes) for tag attachment, the desired area on the posterior carapace will be cleared of epibionts using a scrubbing pad and light sandpaper. The carapace will then be lightly wiped with an acetone-dampened cloth and re-examined for any damage not previously visible. If the area is still appropriate as a tag attachment site, the drill site will be further prepared with a betadine solution. Local anesthetic (lidocaine) will also be administered prior to drilling. A chlorohexadine solution will be used to sterilize the 3mm diameter drill bit used to drill two holes approximately 15mm from the carapace marginal edge. If bleeding occurs during the drilling process, the procedure will cease, and sterile gauze will be applied with pressure to the area of bleeding until it stops. The acoustic transmitter will be tested before it is fitted with fishing wire and sunk into the putty-like two-part epoxy. Vigilant care will be made to avoid epoxy or drilling coming into contact with marginal seams (sutures) and/or the turtle's soft tissue. The wire will be secured evenly around the transmitter, and carefully pressed into the soft epoxy. Sources of potential heat are minimal during the drilling process as they will be monitored throughout the process and the two-part epoxy cures at a low heat in less than an hour. All the edges and corners of the tag application will be smoothed to minimize any potential for entanglement and to help maintain as much of a hydrodynamic surface as possible. Turtles will be released close to the point of capture.

As green turtles tend to rub their carapace on rough surfaces to keep themselves free of epibionts, tag retention has been an issue as turtles have shed the acoustic tags before their batteries have been depleted. To lengthen tag retention, we have begun to use Innovasea V13 coded transmitters that are fitted with a cap which should serve as an additional place to secure the tag and therefore increase tag retention times even if the epoxy layer is shed.

The tags will send a signal to a series of receivers strategically placed within the lagoon. The receivers will allow the team to monitor the movement of turtles within the northern Lake Worth Lagoon. Data from the receivers are typically downloaded every 8–10 months and uploaded to a central node with the Florida

Atlantic Coastal Telemetry (FACT) network. Data from this node is then disseminated to individual researchers at least twice a year.

Analysis

Two separate but complementary methods will be employed to provide quantitative data on relative abundance. The HUNT method visual transects that are associated with capture efforts at both sites generate an index of abundance expressed in terms of sightings per transect kilometer, which is used for comparisons of abundance between different sites and habitat types, and to discern seasonal and annual fluctuations in population levels within a site. The permanently established transect conducted at the Little Munyon Island site can be analyzed using Distance Sampling to provide abundance data expressed as observations per kilometer and thus be comparable to previous HUNT transects. Distance Sampling allows for the variability in surface weather conditions and water clarity that occur between survey days to be accounted for in the determination of effective transect width, which produces lower variable estimates of abundance and allows for calculation of turtle density, since the actual effective area of each transect run is calculated.

A summary report will be provided following completion of the first eight field days. The report will summarize the completed field work and provide a status update of data analysis.
